WOMEN CRUELLY TREATED ON THE TRANSIT LINES

Typical Scene at Ninety-Sixth Street Subway Station.

GETS WORSE NIGHTLY

Evils of the Situation So Great That Relief Must Be Supplied.

An Evening World reporter spent half uptown platform of the Ninety sixth street station of the Subway last night.

This is what he saw: An island platform as long or a little

An island platform as long or a little sit longer than a train. Six pintform genets, all lired and haggard looking. Sour policemen, exhausted and leaning meaning pillars. And—
Fire hundred pushing, shoving, maning men and women, fighting to get on trains that seemed physically unable to casry another soul, let alone a body. Frain after train came in and went out, and the same five hundred fought on. Here and there a niche on a platform invited one or two. tere and there a niche on a platform seited one or two.

The few places were taken by the seas man—man who turned and put left shoulders to the human mass Bills—so out over the edge of the platform. Failing to make an impression on the hams of men and women creahed sarabelike in the platform of one car, a se stant stepped back indicated forward buck the line in football style. The synagogue service is principally the reading of the Book of Esther this morning and evening, not from the book but from special parchments.

The festival of Purim is the occasion of numerous Jewish public celebrations, the principal one, the Purim Ball, the large Hebrew charity, being delayed this year, the date being set for March 12.
